

31st August 2020

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Final volume in ‘Plague-hit planet’ Trilogy to launch in September

When author Karen McCreedy started writing her trilogy about the effect of a plague on an unsuspecting planet, she could not have guessed that the final book would be launching during a pandemic.

‘Ascent’, to be published by Mirror World on September 17th 2020, is the final part of the ‘Unreachable Skies’ trilogy, and is set on a world where it’s normal to fly. The first book saw Zarda, an inexperienced Fate-seer, dealing with the aftermath of a terrible sickness that resulted in wingless young; in volume II, she set out on a long and dangerous journey to exile, where horror and death stalked the route. Now, in volume III, Zarda must find a way back to home territory, in order to fulfil a destiny that has long been foreseen – but with opponents at home, and enemies in the mountains, danger awaits at every turn.

“We’re super-excited about the conclusion of this far-reaching epic, and you should be too!” says Justine Alley Dowsett at Mirror World (www.mirrorworld.com), who are making the book available worldwide via Amazon, Waterstones, and other selected bookshops at an RRP of £12.99. An e-book version will also be released.

Karen has had non-fiction articles and short stories published in various magazines and anthologies, including collections by Zharmae, Luna Station Publishing and Horrified Press. Her short story ‘The Godfather’ was included in 2019’s Aldwick Press anthology ‘Meet the Winners’. She is currently working on her next science-fiction novel.

You can find out more on her website at www.karenmccreedy.com, or follow her on twitter @McKaren_Writer.

(For further media information, please see the Media Pack at <https://www.karenmccreedy.com/media-pack.html>, email enquiries@karenmccreedy.com, or phone 07796 591388.)

###